The poet here intends to establish the peace in the world. He wishes for unity with our own people and also with the strangers. He denigrates battles because battles are the root cause of all ruins. Battles never resolve any problem but add many more leaving a lot of unanswered question. People are victimised. We have already suffered a lot. Any more crises will finish us completely. Hence in the poem the poet made efforts to resolve our differences in the peaceful ways with our own people and also with the strangers. Here, own people refers to people with whom we live and who surrounds us and strangers refer to the foreign people or aliens who does not belong to us means they belongs to different culture and land. We should unite in minds and purposes. First we should Concord with our own people and also with the strangers. Own people refers to the country men with whom we live and shares our joys and sorrows. Strangers refers to the people who does not belong to our culture and land. They make us proper and elightened the divine spirit in it. We should make our efforts and ~~dispute~~ our differences in peaceful ways. We should have Concord with our own people and also with the strangers. Asvins are the dual gods who symbolises the perfect unity of natives and strangers. The poet here while establishing the invocation for unity invokes the god Asvins. Thus, we see that battles cannot ~~solve~~ any problem but add many more problems which finish us completely. We should not let battle try to be raised. We should make efforts to achieve the Concord with our own people and also with the strangers.

The poet is very much concerned for the future of his new-born daughter. He used to provide protective shield for her. The poet thinks that his daughter must be granted beauty but not so much that it disturbs and distracts others. Women who are beautiful try to end everything in itself. They don't give the answer of sincere lovers and as a result they are ultimately unable to get suitable life partner. The reference is obviously to Maud Gonne who has rejected the poet's proposal of marriage and married to Macbride, a worthless person...

Referring to the legends, the Sons of Zeus and Leda married to prince of Troy for the destruction of Troy. The poet wants that his daughter must be free from all kinds of evils. It is a flow of character. He himself suffered a lot but he wants his daughter to be free from it. Hatred is the

He thought that his daughter must possess the beauty but not over much beauty which disturbs and abstracts others. His daughter must be free from intellectual hatred and opinion minded. She should be free from proud and possession. Women should not have this much proud that it enables him to choose the suitable life partner and choose the odd one. The poet thinks that beautiful women eats something special which made him proud and unable to respond sincere lover also. So, the poet opinion about over much beauty is that women should be beautiful but must be free from proud and all kinds of evils.

The poet call the children Sullen because the children of modern generation are differ from that of previous generation. They do not care for their own old generation. They have their own way of living. They think differently and do accordingly. They have no time to look and care the old generation. They lack affinity and feeling. Moral values are vanishing fast. It is the trend of civilisation. People grow indisciplined and ignoring. In this poem the poet travels along in the train along with old age daily passengers with fearful look. The value that he represents depressed the lot of humanity. He hurries come back home to have some time with their family but their children have no time for him. He lives along in the house as no one was there to bother for him and share his woes. He also goes to toilet in order to ease himself
